The disappearing snowman

It was winter. Jack and Johnny loved to play in the snow. One day, they decided to make a snowman. After working for half a day, they had a delightful snowman, with woolen hat, twigs for the hands, a carrot for the nose and some buttons for the eyes, and mouth. The boys were very happy with their snowman. After making the snowman, they went home to rest.

Unfortunately, towards noon, the sun was up, and the snowman began to melt. When the boys came back in the evening to look at their snowman, they exclaimed, "Oh dear! What happened to our snowman?" Soon the sun melted the snowman completely, and the boys were very sad.

The foolish crow

Once, a crow got a piece of freshly baked cake. It happily flew with it and sat on the branch of a tree, so that it could eat it peacefully. Right then, a fox saw the crow with the cake. The fox wanted to eat the cake. So, it decided to play a trick on the crow. The fox said, “Oh crow, I have heard that you are a very good singer. Could you sing one of your great songs for me?”

The crow was flattered. It wanted to show off its singing abilities. So, it opened its beak to sing, and the piece of cake dropped to the ground! The fox caught the cake in its mouth, and quickly ate it.

Moral: Do not fall for flattery.

A monster in the tree!

Hazel and Harry went for a picnic in the forest. As they were looking for a spot to sit down, they saw a tree with a huge hole in its trunk. Inside the hole, it was very dark, but they could see two eyes staring at them. The eyes glowed in the dark. Harry and Hazel were very scared. They thought there was a monster in the tree trunk. They ran away, screaming, “Help! Help! There is a monster here!”

Right then, an old hunter was walking by with a very big gun. He said to the kids, “Don’t worry. I can kill the monster.” He aimed his gun at the two glowing eyes in the hole in the tree trunk.

Right then, a cat jumped out of the hole! The hunter and the kids were surprised and relieved. The eyes belonged to the cat! The hunter said, “You know, cat’s eyes can glow in the dark!” Hazel and Harry thanked the hunter for trying to help.
